DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 U.S.C. § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless --

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-3 and 5-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 102(e) as being anticipated by Banga et al (Hereafter, Banga), "Optimistic Deltas for WWW Latency Reduction", In Proc. 1997 SENIX Technical Conf., pp. 289-303, Anaheim, CA, January, 1997.

Regarding claim 1, Banga teaches a method for updating a configuration page on a user side of an Internet based configuration system without having to contact a server side of the configuration system, the method comprising a responsive to the user side receiving a user input that is associated with delta configuration page information available at the user side, retrieving the delta configuration page information, and updating the configuration page based on the delta configuration page information (i.e., sending delta page for updating the changes from the proxy cache to client without making contact with the content provider) [see Abstract and Pages 295-297].

Regarding claim 2, Banga further teaches the method of claim 1, wherein the delta configuration page information is comprised of a control delta that represents changes in a control of the configuration page as a result of the user input (i.e., deltas controlling based upon client request) [see Page 295].

Regarding claim 3, Banga further teaches the method of claim 1, wherein the delta configuration page information embodies preprocessed configuration engine computations that are responsive to the user input (i.e., computing the delta) [see Page 295].

Regarding claims 5-6, Banga further teaches the method of claim 1, wherein the updating step is performed by a process that is embedded in the configuration page and the delta page information is embedded in the configuration page [see Pages 295-296].

Regarding claims 7-8, Banga teaches a method for transmitting product configuration information generated by a server side of an Internet-based configuration system to user side of the configuration system, the method comprising a generating a configuration page that allows a user to provide a user input to the configuration system, associating delta configuration page information with the configuration page, and transmitting the configuration page and the delta configuration page information to the user side from the server side (i.e., sending delta page for updating the changes from the proxy cache to client) [see Abstract and Pages 295-297].

Claims 9-10 are rejected under the same rationale set forth above to claims 5-6.

Claims 11-12 are rejected under the same rationale set forth above to claims 2-3.

Regarding claim 13, Banga further teaches the method of claim 7 further comprising transmitting a process for updating the configuration page with the delta configuration page information to the user side from the server side [see Abstract].

Claims 14, 16, 18, 20 and 21 are rejected under the same rationale set forth above to claim 7.

Claim 15 is rejected under the same rationale set forth above to claim 11.

Claims 17 and 19 are rejected under the same rationale set forth above to claim

1.

Claim Rejections - 35 U.S.C. § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Banga et al (Hereafter, Banga), "Optimistic Deltas for WWW Latency Reduction", In Proc. 1997 SENIX Technical Conf., pp. 289-303, Anaheim, CA, January, 1997 in view of Sutcliffe et al (Hereafter, Sutcliffe), U.S. Pat. No. 6,253,216.

Regarding claim 4, Banga does not explicitly teach the method of claim 1, wherein the updating step further comprises layering the delta configuration page information that is associated with the user input into the configuration page via Dynamic HTML. However, the use of dynamic HTML is well-known in the art as disclosed by Sutcliffe [see Col. 8, Lines 24-65]. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to implement dynamic HTML because it would have enhanced the user to register and update personalized information on the web [see Col. 8, Lines 37-39].
